The session provided to be highly beneficial, providing students with valuable insights about career planning and the evolving nature of professional growth.

Mr. Sachin Kumar began the session by addressing a common issue in India: most people don't start planning their careers seriously until it's too late, often due to traditional mindsets and societal expectations. He strongly encouraged students to get started early.

Session Highlights:

The session emphasized the importance of starting career planning early—ideally in the second, third and fourth year of college—and choosing a path based on one's own interests rather than external expectations. Mr. Sachin Kumar highlighted emerging opportunities in fields like Chartered Accountancy, Banking, and Financial Services, along with the growing need for skills such as data analysis and effective communication. The workshop's main focus was interview preparation, where students learned to present themselves confidently and turn weaknesses into strengths. By the end, they understood the value of professional certifications and how to align their learning with industry expectations.
